FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

December 12, 2006--

Does "sending Christmas cards" really have to be the unpleasant ordeal that the holiday song parody, The 12 Pains of Christmas, makes it out to be? Custom-Christmas-Card.com says no. People who prefer the convenience of online and mail order Christmas shopping can continue to avoid long lines at the mall and post office thanks to Custom-Christmas-Card.com. At this and many other sites like it, holiday well-wishers are able to select, personalize, and have their custom Christmas cards printed and mailed, on time, all from the comfort of their home or office computer. All this, and the cards cost less than the price of a store-bought greeting card.

At <http://www.Custom-Christmas-Card.com>, members are offered an array of service features to add style and personality to their custom Christmas cards while making it easier than ever to send to groups with just a click of the mouse.

The site offers over 500 "winter holiday" designs ranging from silly to serious to sleek to sentimental and everything in between. Popular choices for this time of year include Christmas, Chanukah, Kwanza, New Year's, and generic "Season's Greetings." Many holiday card senders are taking advantage of the photo upload feature to send pictures of their families and beloved pets to friends and loved ones.

Special features include card design customization (choose from a wide assortment, upload your own image, or combine), standard greeting or "write your own message," and the unique option to create a font in your own handwriting. Customers are also finding handy uses for the contact list management feature that Custom-Christmas-Card.com offers with their membership. Simply custom design a "card campaign," type in your address details, and then send to a group of business or personal contacts that you can then use over and over for this purpose.
